Introduction

There are numerous internal controls and protocols in effect at the University that govern how individuals with the authority to spend the University's financial resources or execute contracts and agreements that commit the University to financial or other obligations must comply with. These internal controls and protocols have been set based on the signing authorities as provided for in this policy.

Policy

The authority to enter into contracts, agreements, payments and banking transactions that relate to the general operation of FNUniv binds the University to the terms as outlined in the instrument being signed. As such, the authority to sign these instruments is specified and as outlined in this policy. In most instances, two approved signing officers are needed to execute all instruments (contracts, agreements, cheques, payments, banking transactions, etc.).

All payments issued by the University are subject to strict authorization protocols as stipulated by the University's Board of Governors. Similarly, all contracts or agreements executed by the University are also subject to strict authorization protocols as approved by the Board of Governors. Finally, no employee may, either verbally or in writing, enter into or terminate a commitment that creates an obligation or undertaking on behalf of the University unless that employee has authority in accordance and compliance with this policy and has ensured that the required due diligence has been done.

Roles and Responsibilities

1. Board of Governors

a. Execution of Instruments

- i. The Chair of the Board of Governors along with the President will have the authority to sign contracts, Collective Bargaining Agreements, transfers, mortgages, and other instruments or documents required to be in writing and to which the University is a party and which are deemed to be properly executed by the University if the corporate name and seal of the University are affixed thereto.
