

Moving Across Rural and Urban Aftercare Spaces to Support Healing from Addiction is an exploration of the current aftercare services, resources, and gaps in care for people, family, and friends in healing from addiction. We are looking for interested service organizations to inform our study about what the future might look like in moving rural aftercare services to urban settings. Our intention is to seek guidance and support in creating an Urban Healing Center that prioritizes Indigenous ways of knowing and healing for everyone. This is the first step in a larger exploration that will include potential partners and end-user input.
